READ THE FOLLOWING NOTICES OF THE PRESS. "This is an 'American novel,' issued in a most unpretending form, but one of a character far above the kindred productions of the day. It displays an insight into human nature and a skill in the definestion and analysis of chracter, that cannot fall to give the authoress a prominent position among her cotemporaries. The book abounds with surness of intense interest, the whole plot being wrought out with much power and effect; no one, we are confident, can read it without acknowledging that it possesses more than ordinary merit."—[Newark Advertiser.

This graphic and stirring tale is one of the most agreeable of Mrs Southworth's works, the accues are laid in the almost imperial days of Old Virginia, when her sous and daughters might almost vie with Europe in grandeur and aristocratic pride and dignity; it is told with powerful dramatic interest."—Saturday Evening Post. writing Fost.

"This book deserves more than ordinary notice. We do not often read its vels; but when we opened this we found it difficult to lay it down. The characters as ewell drawn, and unexaggerated, so that they seem like people one meets every day, and the interest is an stained to the last, with a great deal of power."—[Boston Pilot.
